
Contents

Introduction	xiii
Part 1. Historical Developments and Contemporary Modalities of Interactions between Education and Territories	1
Introduction to Part 1.	3
Chapter 1. What Role Should Territories Play in Public Education Policies?	5
Bruno GARNIER
1.1. Summary	5
1.2. Introduction.	5
1.3. Can the policy of recognition be established in France?	6
1.4. Globalization and national identity	8
1.5. Territorialization of education policies.	10
1.6. Conclusion	12
1.7. Bibliography	13
Chapter 2. Heads of Schools: New Education– Territory Interaction Drivers?	19
Alain BOUVIER, Michel BOYER, Thierry EYMARD and Laurent RIEUTORT
2.1. Summary	19
2.2. Introduction.	19
2.3. Territories and the educational system: renewed challenges	20
2.3.1. The student at the center of a territorialized educational ecosystem.	20
2.3.2. Geographical change: from “identity territory” to “network territory”.	22

2.3.3. Seek coupling and collaboration among educational spaces.	24
2.4. A research-action project.	26
2.4.1. Knowledge based for co-construction within the territories.	26
2.4.2. Quebec experience: community school.	27
2.4.3. First step in collecting practices.	28
2.5. Territorial risk management: first points of view.	29
2.5.1. Which drivers? Being promoters of open, integrative and territorialized educational practices.	29
2.5.2. What actions? Address the challenge of success and build partnerships.	30
2.5.3. Which territories? At the heart of a new territoriality.	32
2.6. Conclusion.	35
2.7. Bibliography.	35
Chapter 3. Educational Success: A Multi-actor Project in a Learning Territory Approach.	37
Maryvonne DUSSAUX
3.1. Summary.	37
3.2. Introduction.	37
3.3. Educational success: responsibility of local actors.	39
3.3.1. An increasingly global and territorialized action.	39
3.3.2. Education at the heart of the territory project.	42
3.4. Networks of actors in the field of education.	48
3.4.1. Reformulation of social and educational action.	48
3.4.2. Toward a “learning territory” approach.	54
3.5. Conclusion.	58
3.6. Bibliography.	59
Chapter 4. “Education For”, Territories and Positions of Teachers: Rupture and Tension.	61
Jean-Marc LANGE
4.1. Summary.	61
4.2. Introduction.	61
4.3. School model and territories.	62
4.4. An inclusion for what purpose?	63
4.5. “Create a community” to address development challenges.	66
4.5.1. Project modality.	66
4.5.2. Possible forms and desirable form.	67
4.6. Conclusion and perspectives: social responsibility of the school undertaken.	71
4.7. Bibliography.	72

Chapter 5. Education for Sustainable Development and Territories: Toward a New Age of Educational Relationships with Territories in Agricultural Education?	77
Christian PELTIER
5.1. Summary	77
5.2. Introduction.	78
5.3. Structuring elements of the link with the territory in agricultural education	79
5.3.1. Specificities enhancing opening to the territories	79
5.3.2. An old anchorage and new perspectives	80
5.3.3. A double difficulty: problematization and knowledge-tools.	83
5.3.4. The opportunity of the “teach to produce differently” strategic project.	84
5.4. An educational approach by territorialized integrative objects.	85
5.4.1. The concept of integrative object	85
5.4.2. A didactic and territorial approach to integrative objects	86
5.4.3. Knowledge at stake: cognitive and conceptual approach to territorialized integrative objects	87
5.5. Issues posed by teaching activities on some territorialized integrative objects.	88
5.5.1. Badger	89
5.5.2. Chicken breeding	91
5.5.3. The vegetable garden.	92
5.6. Conclusion	93
5.7. Bibliography	95
Case Study 1. What Levers Exist for Preventing Orientation and Education Inequalities of Territorial Origin in Adult Training? Case of the Bio-construction Regional Vocational Training Center in the Southern Alps	99
Valérie GUILLEMOT
Part 2. Territories as Sources of Pedagogical Renewal	115
Introduction to Part 2	117
Chapter 6. Local Territory in French School Geography	119
Christine VERGNOLLE MAINAR, Sophie GAUJAL and Caroline LEININGER-FREZAL
6.1. Summary	119
6.2. Introduction.	119
6.3. Local setting in the teaching of geography: a variable place according to the eras and levels of education.	121

6.3.1. 19th–20th Century: back and forth of the study of local setting in syllabuses	121
6.3.2. 21st Century: the primacy of the local setting in primary school, introducing the local setting in secondary schools	123
6.4. Relevance of the local setting in contemporary school geography: a challenge for teachers	126
6.4.1. Inhabiting: an epistemologically vague term.	126
6.4.2. Difficulties in handling the local setting	128
6.4.3. Studying the local setting: a vector to transform ordinary practices.	130
6.5. Conclusion	132
6.6. Bibliography	133
Chapter 7. When Territorial Commitment Gives Meaning to Professional Activity: Cases of Teachers in Rural Schools in France, Chile and Uruguay	135
Catherine ROTHENBURGER
7.1. Summary	135
7.2. Introduction.	135
7.3. Theoretical contributions.	136
7.4. Methodology	137
7.5. Findings	138
7.5.1. Search for the territory social recognition and learning: common bases of a territorial commitment	138
7.5.2. Territorial commitment: what local issues and actions?	140
7.6. Conclusion	142
7.7. Bibliography	144
Chapter 8. Relatedness with the Non-Human Environment and Motivation Systems: Keys to Include the Territory in Environmental Education.	147
Christian REYNAUD, Rouba REAIDI and Serge FRANC
8.1. Abstract	147
8.2. Introduction.	147
8.3. A complex model of human motivations	148
8.4. Relatedness between non-human environment and motivation	150
8.5. Relatedness, sensitive approach to environmental education and motivation.	151
8.6. Conclusion	153
8.7. Bibliography	153

Chapter 9. Territory-Based Education in Elementary Schools: PNR Queyras-EN Projects	155
Sylviane BLANC-MAXIMIN and Michel FLORO
9.1. Summary	155
9.2. Introduction.	155
9.3. School–territory relationships faced with different types of conflicts.	156
9.4. The concept of territory-based education	157
9.4.1. Know-how favored by territory	158
9.4.2. A cultural mediator aspect.	159
9.4.3. The territory via its local heritage: promoter of values?	160
9.4.4. Territory-based education?	161
9.4.5. Conditions for the integration of the school in its territory.	161
9.5. Case study: partnership territorial educative project in the Queyras valley.	162
9.5.1. Queyras and its writing tradition	162
9.5.2. Methodology	163
9.6. Results.	164
9.6.1. Acquisition of local know-how.	164
9.6.2. Unleashing the power of expression.	165
9.6.3. Ambitious pedagogic approach.	165
9.6.4. Civic values?	165
9.6.5. Education on local heritage	166
9.6.6. Making people responsible?	166
9.6.7. Heritage: a risk of isolationism	166
9.7. Conclusion	167
9.7.1. Anchoring a mountain territory in primary school partnership projects.	167
9.7.2. A dynamic territory.	168
9.7.3. Which emancipation?	168
9.7.4. The territory, a dynamic tool for education.	169
9.8. Bibliography	169
 Chapter 10. Sensitive Postcard of a Local Territory: Development and Issues	 173
Sophie GAUJAL
10.1. Summary	173
10.2. Introduction.	173
10.3. First stage (T1): an ordinary course that promotes reasoned geography.	174
10.4. Second stage (T2): generating spontaneous geography through a field trip	175

10.5. Third stage (T3): articulating spontaneous geography and reasoned geography by the development of a sensitive postcard.	178
10.6. Fourth stage (T4): reformulations	186
10.6.1. Overview	186
10.7. Bibliography	187
Case Study 2. Is the Rural Primary School a Hospitable School? Parents' Point of View	189
Benoit DEJAIFFE
Part 3. Educational Policies and Territorial Education Inequalities	203
Introduction to Part 3	205
Chapter 11. The Rural School, a Polysemous Object with Significant Societal Challenges? Current Research Contexts and Positions	207
Angela BARTHES and Yves ALPE
11.1. Summary	207
11.2. Introduction	207
11.3. How the rural school became a research "problem" and subject	208
11.3.1. The supposed "deficiencies" of the rural school and inappropriateness of educational policies.	208
11.3.2. Pedagogical and institutional responses to the supposed difficulties of rural students.	210
11.4. What research exists around the rural school problems?	212
11.5. Current major research debates on rural schools	215
11.5.1. The paradox of good rural academic results	215
11.5.2. Can we still talk about the lack of ambition by rural students?	216
11.5.3. Is there a "territory effect" on the educational performance and trajectories of rural students?	216
11.6. Conclusion	218
11.7. Bibliography	220
Chapter 12. Relationships between Career Orientation and Territoriality: Elements of Theorization from Rural Mountain Areas	223
Pierre CHAMPOLLION
12.1. Summary	223
12.2. Introduction: historical reviews related to the general theme: "education and territory".	224

12.3. Key components of the conceptual framework	228
12.3.1. Educational inequalities, academic inequalities, career orientation inequalities	228
12.3.2. Territory and territoriality: two related composite concepts	229
12.4. The case of rural mountain area schools	232
12.4.1. The initial question	232
12.4.2. Main characteristics of the rural mountain area school	234
12.4.3. Current developments: toward a gradual “deconstruction” of the historical specificity of the rural mountain area school?	237
12.5. Approaches to the relationships between career orientation and territoriality	238
12.5.1. Historical background and societal challenges	238
12.5.2. Career orientation in rural mountain areas	239
12.5.3. Adapting the school to the local context.	241
12.5.4. “Effects of territory”?.	243
12.6. Conclusions: main achievements of the research, pending issues, thematic continuity and elaboration and avenues for research	247
12.6.1. Main achievements of the research.	247
12.6.2. Pending issues	248
12.6.3. Thematic continuity and elaboration.	248
12.6.4. Toward a theoretical reappraisal?.	250
12.6.5. By way of proper “conclusion”.	251
12.7. Bibliography	252
Chapter 13. Toward Convergences between Rural and Urban? Comparative Analyses of Educational Contexts and Social Representations in CM2	261
Pierre CHAMPOLLION
13.1. Summary	261
13.2. Introduction	262
13.3. Problem and current developments	262
13.4. Corpus and methodology	265
13.4.1. Corpus.	265
13.4.2. Methodology.	267
13.5. Findings and analyses	267
13.5.1. Contexts (cultural and family)	267
13.5.2. Territorial social representations (of surrounding and remote territories)	272
13.5.3. Perceived behaviors, assessed-projected performances and orientation–insertion projects	275

13.5.4. General overview of section 13.5.	283
13.6. Provisional findings and research avenues.	284
13.7. Bibliography	286
Chapter 14. The Inadequacy of French Rural School Public Policies	289
Yves ALPE and Angela BARTHES
14.1. Summary	289
14.2. Introduction.	289
14.3. Rural school contexts and recent research developments	290
14.3.1. Age-old delay of the rural school and its poor image	290
14.3.2. The reversal of trends from the 1990s: toward the observation of good academic performance of rural students.	291
14.3.3. What recent studies on the rural school apparently reveal: the end of rural student specificity?	292
14.3.4. Rural students' school projects are becoming less and less specific.	295
14.3.5. Rural students' professional plans are no longer significantly marked by their territory of residence.	297
14.3.6. End of rural students' attachment to their territory?	301
14.4. End of rural students "specificity" and inadequacy of public education policies.	303
14.4.1. What the General Inspectorate's reports said about rural schools.	303
14.4.2. Territorialized educational policies in view of rural developments	304
14.5. Conclusion	306
14.6. Bibliography	307
Case Study 3. Comparison of Rural and Urban Area Girls' Career Orientation at the End of Troisième.	309
Boris MEUNIER
Conclusion.	319
List of Authors	325
Index	327